

1. I wasted resources and blew money without considering what my personal obligations were first.

2. In Oct the night I went to see Greg Moore to reg him for WW in the fitness center. I was on the treadmill and it was about 10:23 pm when Micky walked by. I stopped him and told him he needed to reg me for the Responsibility Tapes and that I was holding him personally responsible to make sure that occurred. He promised he would. He asked me when I could get them and I told him I couldn't pay for them all at once but that I had the ability to pay $100 towards them until they were paid. I made this big deal about it and how he had to track me down and 8C me to get the cycle. I told him I'd bring $100 the following night and he had to find me. He said he would. The following night I was around but I never saw him. I got ready to go and went to see Sonya. I told her how I had this game mocked up with Micky for these tapes and that he was supposed to have gotten the money from me but he didn't so I was giving it to her instead. I told her the game and that she should tell Micky too bad, she got it. She invoiced my $100. and I left. On my way out I saw Mickey and told him I'd waited but I didn't see him so I gave the money to Sonya. Two weeks later I didn't have enough money to pay my rent and ended up paying late fees.

1. I broke an agreement with an SO member.

2. That same night as above when I saw Mickey at the base right outside the elevator when I left Sonya's office. I had promised him the night before that I'd flow him $100 towards my responsibility tapes but he had to find me. He did find me around 11:00 as I was leaving the org. I had already given the money to Sonya. We had no specific time on when he was to find me, just that he was. I jumped the gun and gave his money up before the night was over so he ended up with the loss but not really, he did his part, I didn't do mine. He was $100 commissionwise poorer and I committed an overt on him lessening our ARC. I actually felt wierd when I saw him but I quickly justified it.

1. I blew from an SO member

2. The night at Vic Salsa's office when he was trying to reg me for a donation for the IAS, it was in February 95. I had gone to him so he could give me a briefing. He did and I was only interested in what he could contribute to me, not what I could contribute to him. I had already committed to 250.00 per pay period to the IAS and considered that plenty for now, I actually had no idea how much I could truly have contributed because of my out-ethics on my personal finance lines. When he began asking me for a bigger contribution I ridged on him, he was missing my w/h of not having my finances under control. I told him flat out "i didn't borrow money!" and made him wrong for asking me to. He knew I could do more and so did I but I refused to confront it. We went out of ARC and I stood up to blow, he tried to keep the ARC in and the comm cycle in but I blew off his comm line. I never sent in my already promised $250 after that point and got off my IAS payment schedule from that point forward. I lost my comm line with Vic (not according to him but as far as I was concerned I had damaged it), I wasted money that I had promised to the IAS, I lowered my affinity with the IAS as a group by committing overts on them.

1. I abandoned my own finance hat and gave it to someone else to be responsible for.

2. In June of 94 at Kurt's place. I agreed to turn my finance hat over to him and let him be responsible for my money and disbursements. We discussed what the FP would be for us as a 2D. I kept trying to blow from it, telling him that he just needed to figure it out and whatever he said was fine, I didn't care. We worked it all out and I ended up with $100.00 per month as a clothes allowance, the only real thing I asked for over and above what my ordinary expenses were. I gave no thought to it, just said ok that's fine with me. He set it up so that my Bridge APs would be on the same schedule as his, not according to what was successful for me but what was successful for him. Again I said fine and went along with it. We ended up in a big knock down drag out fight later because I changed my mind after talking to a friend (who I had made responsible for this decision as well) and told him that what we had agreed to would not work and I wanted to do it a different way, which happened to be an overt for him as he didn't run his finances the same way as I did. Our ARC was severely damaged, we never could resolve it because I wouldn't spit out the truth on what my disagreement was. My w/h kept being missed on how I wasn't taking responsibility for my own finances nor did I want to. Bennetta was dev-t'd in having to intervene. Many more arguments and problems ensued from this.

~~1.~~ qw I DECIDED TO MAKE BEN RESPONSIBLE FOR MY FINANCES
1. I dumped my finance hat on Bennetta.

2. Right after Kurt and I had done this work out on our finances I had gone shopping with Bennetta the following weekend. We were driving in her car to the mall and I happened to mention the fact that I only had $100 to spend. She began asking questions as to why that was. I told her what Kurt and I had agreed to and she had a tough time understanding it. She asked me lots of questions to help me to see what I was doing but I refused to look. I never intended to take responsibility for the decisions I had made so I blew off what she was trying to get me to look at. Then I began shifting the responsibility to her looking at what she thought I should do instead of what I wanted to do. From what she pointed out to me I concluded that "what she wanted me to do" was blah. She had pointed out that I made mega bucks that I was in a personal condition of power that I had been applying my conditions just fine up to that point and why did I need all of this dictation and budgeting and so forth? I ignored the truth of what she was saying and pinned the responsibility solely on her. After our shopping trip I went home to Kurt's. I had looked at everything Bennetta had told me and decided that what she really thought needed to happen was I needed to be able to spend as much money as I wanted and that for me to agree to anything else was wrong. That was not at all what she had said but it is what I dubbed in. I sat down on the floor in the living room and told Kurt I needed to talk to him. I told him that

I had looked at what we had agreed on regarding our finances and that I couldn't keep the agreement to only $100 per month on a clothes allowance. He asked me why and I told him that I made enough money that I should be able to spend as much as I wanted to. He ridged on this - being correct, as his policy and conditions on finance were far away from mine and he operated on a whole different system than I did. We instantly went into a games condition of me making him wrong for how he operated and him making me wrong for the way I operated, nothing was accomplished as far as bringing us closer together. We suffered a long and arduous ARC break, this caused Dev-t on our 2D and my 3D (my post production is always affected when I have any other flaps in my life going on), this put him further out of ARC with my group as he associated Bennetta with AMC as she is an exec of this group.

OW I DECIDED TO NOT BE RESPONSIBLE FOR MY FINANCES
~~I let Bennetta be blamed for my no responsibility on my finances.~~
~~AND LET FORCED PEN TO BE~~

2. The day Kurt and I had a confrontation about my disagreement on how our finances would be handled. I had abruptly announced in a very self righteous way that I had changed my mind about what we agreed to and that what we had decided would not work at all for me. I'm sure this came as a great shock to him as just the week before I had not expressed ANY form of disagreement whatsoever and had just given it completely over to him to handle in complete and total ARC. Now all of a sudden out of the clear blue sky, just so happened to be after I spent a full day with Bennetta Slaughter, I come up with this flap about how I completely disagree with how the finances are to be handled. What else was he supposed to think? Bennetta had obviously been meddling into our affairs according to what he could see! He immediately said something to this effect like "it sure seems odd that just last week you were ok on this and now you spend the day with Bennetta and it's all for shit". I jumped on that very defensively only solidifying his suspicion that Bennetta had interfered. There could have been no doubt whatsoever no matter what I said that Bennetta was the one who stirred up trouble on this finance issue with us. His ARC with her was lowered, his ARC with our AMC group was lowered because if the senior exec is working against him then surely she's got everyone else here working against him too. He knew she is the OL of the group. Bennetta was made out to be a bad guy and she never knew it.

1. I gave Kurt the finance hat then I yanked it away from him causing trouble for him, our 2D me and my 3D.

2. One Saturday in July 94 at Kurts place, Kurt and I decided to co-mingle our money. This was something he considered to be important and I went along with it as it took my responsibility for my finances and directed it to someone else. We agreed that he would manage the money and pay all the bills and I would just make money and deposit checks. We spent a good deal of the afternoon working on it, mainly him though as I kept rabbiting from the activity and just telling him whatever he said was fine, just let me know how things were going to be. He consulted me on every matter, every bill, every disbursement, every agreement and each time I'd just say, I don't care, whatever you say is fine. He worked everything out and did a great job. I did not have to worry about anything on this hat any longer. I turned my checkbook over to him, all my bills and the amounts owed and he completely took responsibility for the hat. One week later I went shopping with Bennetta and came home and announced to him that what we had worked out would not do for me at all and that I wanted to just spend as much as I wanted to spend and he just needed to get over it. He wasn't exactly thrilled with the idea and became upset. I became more "right" in my decision and just asserted myself even harder until he didn't have a chance. He gave up and gave the hat of my finances back to me. We had many discussions about this and got absolutely nowhere so we wasted much time. We had an ongoing ARC break on this issue that never was resolved. He was confused at why I would do this to him and never got any explanation so he is still left with the confusion. He was ripped off a hat he was wearing well which was a wrong condition to him.

1. I knowingly violated my condition on my own finances and dumped my hat without making my condition known.

2. When I was having a 2D with Kurt in June of 94 we agreed to co-mingle our money. This decision was made in his bedroom one night. I knew from discussions we had on how he spent money that he was more frugal than me and that he operated on a whole different condition than me in this area. When he wanted something he cut back, this worked well for him. He paid for his bridge in big chunks at the end of the year which was the best way for him due to his income schedule and what would allow him the greatest tax benefits. I knew he considered his credit cards to be a savings. Not something I could do since I didn't have credit cards but it worked well for him. These were major differences in our finance op basis which I knew about and chose to ignore. I never told him what my op basis was on my money (because there wasn't really a standard one!) and just turned everything over to him to handle. As a result, the wrong condition was applied to my finances and I flapped later. Kurt had no idea what the real upset was and was left in mystery. We had a perpetual 2D flap over this and never came to any understanding whatsoever.

OW I ~~dumped my finance hat and misapplied the condition and wasted my only resources.~~ ^{DECIDED TO THROW OUT MY CONDITION ON} FINANCE

2. When I was 16 in Dallas. My dad had helped me to set up a savings and showed me a simple way to establish credit quickly which I would need for things later in life, like buying a car etc. He suggested that I put 50.00 every paycheck into a savings account until I had accumulated $500.00. Then I should go to the bank and make a loan for $300 against the money and then pay it back using the savings if I got into a bind but otherwise I should use the money I earned to pay it back. I saved the $500. I borrowed the $300. I used the savings to pay back the loan on time and established credit. I squandered the balance at $50. a pop each week until my savings was completely depleted. I blew the money on frivolous stuff, anything I wanted I just bought until all my savings was spent. I had absolutely nothing to show for it. I had credit but I had no savings. I never re-established any kind of savings whatsoever. Had I just maintained my savings at $50 per paycheck like I had over the past 20 years I would have accumulated 26,000. So I have wasted 26,000. at least. I ruined my future savings and credit eventually due to this out ethics.
